The George Barbour House Site

Rison Vicinity

Private

This small one story, one room frame house was built as the residence for George Barber and family. Though built with the methods of the time (balloon frame) and with the mass-produced materials, it retains the traditional design of the small houses for the rural poor.

DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (IF KNOWN) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

According to William ¹⁰⁰, the black oral informant who led me to this site and who was raised in this vicinity of Charles County, this small, abandoned, unpainted house was built in the 1890's as the residence of George Barb^{or} and his family

The house faces south toward Rt. 224 and was originally a farmhouse, though today the land is no longer cultivated. Like the earlier houses of nonlandowning black farmers, the house is very simple in design, consisting of one room downstairs and another upstairs. The front and rear lengths both have two bays: a door and a window opposite one another on each side. The gable ends have no windows. A brick stove flue ascends the interior of the western gable end and is original to construction. The A roof has given way on the southern side, and the entire house will soon collapse or be torn down.

The house is balloon frame, and like other 19th century balloon frame houses of blacks in southern Maryland, the framing members and weatherboards are fastened by wire nails, instead of cut nails, thereby indicating the adoption of this method of building houses to have taken place late in the century. In many other parts of the nation, it had become widespread by the middle of the century.

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

This is the first balloon frame house built in Charles County for a black family, according to William Diggs. All other houses, he said, were log. This one was also heated by a wood stove, and was ventilated with glass p windows, instead of the more traditional wooden shutters. Despite its advances in terms of construction, this house remained approximately the same size as the earlier houses and contained only one room down and one up, the traditional plan.

Note: This house was bulldozed after the first visit to site, and no pictures were taken at that time. So there are no photographs of this site.

Note: For further information about this house, contact William Diggs.
